I am currently the Director of Science & Technology at the Marymount School of New York, where I teach Atmospheric Science and Advanced Physics. I have also taught AP Physics C.

Reflections

From my discussions with my colleagues both in my own school and in other schools, there is considerable excitement about this endeavor.

Many faculty view it as an opportunity to develop collaborations with other schools.

I'm also very excited. The meeting gave me a much needed jolt in the arm about the project. I am looking forward to working with the group.

There are a lot of great ideas here and I'm impressed by the caliber of the participants.
